The gift season will soon be upon us, writes L. It, and sho asks for suggestions the intends to make the Christmas prepents which she bestows this year. Almost every woll in his a passion for baskets

She intends to make the Christmas presents which she bestows this year. Almost every woth it has a passion for buskely I don't know what there is about a baskel to feedbate and allure, but the fact is that no display of these useful articles is ever willingly passed unnoticed. So you may be sure that in presenting a protty busket to a won an you will please her. Square ones of fauly striev or willow are imade very orn mean if by lining them with satin and fastening the fining down in diamondlike squares with small buttons covered with the sufe. For this purpose you can use fit button-moulds or old buttons from which fidling has worn off. A fixely-worthwhat of good size which may be used for a caps or for waste paper, is heautifully decorated by putting a deep ribbon band at the bottom; cubridder some simple but showy pattern upon this, and fet the stike it rush above the ribbon, with along usefile made afteches through the basket that if, it is too show an operation to embridder the entire band after it is put upon the basket, this may be embredered its, but be sure to be very some sprays to finish after the band is in place, for it adds very much to the fine appearance of the basket at bright liften is always effective. A plain and striight willow busket which is very opon, may be made very handsonaby cubroldering, a band to be pluedd around the centre of the basket; this baid may be of any wildth you please; is inches its a good wildth; aboyo and below this put plush bands of equal wildth; fasten these with invisible silvches and put a pretty boy of ribbon on one handle quiy. A low, squat buset with a cover is precyclift upon the cover laworked a squay it large sellow disless with a good many green sellow still another way to disside a basket.
